

Andrea Lodovichetti was born in Italy in 1976, and currently lives between the US and Italy. Graduated in film directing at the Centro Sperimentale di Cinematografia (National School of Film - Italy), he has been assistant director for the academy award winning director Paolo Sorrentino for the movies "L'amico di famiglia" (aka "The family friend") and "Il divo" (aka "The celebrity"). Writer, producer and director, he won a consistent number of international awards in important film festivals all around the world. The internationally acclaimed short film "Sotto il mio giardino" (aka "Under my garden") won over 30 prizes including the Italian golden globe and the Spike Lee's babelgum film festival "Looking for a genius award" in Cannes. He's the founder, together with Luca Caprara, of Lobecafilm, an independent production company based in Italy.

Website

<http://www.andrealodovichetti.com>